Dear Han-Kuan Bai,

The Pennsylvania State University Department of Public Health Sciences is pleased to welcome you as a participant of the Penn State University Global Health Exchange Program (GHEP) at the College of Medicine located in Hershey, Pennsylvania. Given the Pennsylvania State University's extensive experience in training international students and its university-level commitment to global health, the graduate programs in public health are well-equipped to offer interactive learning opportunities along with cultural experiences that expose students into the field of public health in the United States.

The GHEP will take place in a variety of educational and professional settings.

1. Educational lectures by Penn State College of Medicine faculty
2. Shadowing and observational learning in the Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center and College of Medicine
3. Visits to regional public health organizations
4. Cultural exchange and discussion of public health topics with Penn State students

The GHEP will begin on Monday, July 10, 2023 until Friday, July 28, 2023 when you will return to your home country. We would like you to arrive anytime between Thursday, July 6 and Sunday, July 8, 2023. You will stay in housing located on the Penn State College of Medicine campus for the duration of the program.

Since you will not be enrolled as a Penn State student, nor will you be participating in research activities at the University, your visit can be conducted under the B-1 (visitor for business) because you are participating in a seminar as described in the Foreign Affairs Manual 9 FAM 402.2-5(9)B.

The Pennsylvania State University has celebrated a long tradition of connecting students and faculty of diverse cultures to exchange ideas and experiences, making the Penn State Global Health Exchange Program an exciting opportunity in the discipline of public health.

Sincerely,
